

Netflix, Inc. Political Activity Disclosures

Overview

Netflix engages in public policy advocacy for issues that could impact our business and members. Our Public Policy team, which reports directly to our Chief Legal Officer, oversees regulatory matters and government affairs globally, including our direct and indirect advocacy internationally and in the United States. We use corporate resources or our political action committee for electoral or political activity only where permitted by law and appropriate in promoting our policy objectives and priorities. Contributions are not made on the basis of individual political preferences of Netflix employees. Recently, our political contributions have been limited. Additional information regarding Netflix's political contributions and expenditures are set forth below.

Board Oversight

Oversight of our political contribution and lobbying matters is provided by the Nominating and Governance Committee of the Board, which reviews the Political Activity Disclosures, including the Trade Association Dues listed below, on an annual basis.

Public Policy Positions

Netflix's public policy advocacy spans a wide array of issues of interest to our business and members, including intellectual property protection; freedom of expression; online safety; data security; free and fair trade; economic development; and sustainable development. Netflix's Public Policy team regularly evaluates our advocacy to ensure it is in furtherance of these and other business interests.

U.S. Political Contributions

The Netflix PAC's Federal Election Commission (FEC) reports, which include details of contributions and expenditures, are publicly available on the FEC website here.

Although Netflix is prohibited under federal law from making political contributions at the federal level, it may, from time to time, contribute corporate funds at the state or local level where permitted by law. Set forth below are the political contributions made by Netflix during calendar years listed to candidate campaigns, political party committees, political committees, other political organizations exempt from federal income taxes under Section 527 of the Internal Revenue Code, and ballot measure committees. During the calendar year 2022, no such contributions were made.

U.S. Lobbying Activities

Netflix submits U.S. federal lobbying disclosure reports to the Secretary of the Senate and Office of the Clerk of the House of Representatives disclosing, among other things, the amount the company spends on federal lobbying activities. Netflix also files similar reports as required under applicable state or local law to relevant state or local authorities, which are available on their respective websites.

Trade Associations

Netflix belongs to a number of trade associations globally for various business-related reasons, such as monitoring services related to legislative/policy developments, networking with peer firms, and helping develop industry best practices. We join these organizations where we believe membership will enable us to work collaboratively with other companies and groups on public policy issues, an approach that is consistent with many of our peers. Netflix reviews these memberships periodically to weigh their business value and alignment with our policies and priorities and in deciding whether to renew the membership. In addition, before we join an association, we look to have general alignment with the association on our policy priorities. While we pay membership dues, and associations use some of our membership dues for lobbying purposes, we do not control how such dues are spent. While we are often invited to provide input to inform the development of policy positions or advocacy decisions, and we may share our views to seek alignment, we do not have control over the position or decision an organization ultimately takes on a given matter. Association positions on public policy reflect the range of views of the membership. In instances where an organization offers support for a position not aligned with ours, we often share our views to offer guidance and promote a reasonable compromise. We have decided not to renew some memberships due to misalignment on issue areas of interest and policy approaches.

While the groups we work with will continue to evolve, below is a list of our trade association memberships, to which we have paid membership dues of $25,000 or more in 2022.
